ALASKA'S PHANTOM CITY

Mr. White Saw It in a Mirage and Thinks it May Be a Settlement at the Pole.

Someone revives every five years the legend of the Silent City, seen as a mirage over the Muir Glacier, in Glacier Bay, Alaska, 150 miles above Juneau. What professes to be a photo-engraving of the city with affidavit attached was published and sold some years ago, and at least half a dozen white men profess to have seen the city, while the natives of the Alaskan coasts cherish the tradition of its existence. The mir-age is usually visible at about this time of year. One man declares that he saw it on July 5, 1889, and two others, it is declared, have made affidavit that they saw it three days before that date. John M. White, a Virginian, who after ten or fifteen years spent in various parts of the West had settled down in Philadelphia, solemnly declares that he saw it on June 21 some years ago.

Mr. White's account of the phenomenon is circumstantial in the highest degree, and he joins to it a theory of what the city is and where it lies. He declares that he studied the mirage for nine hours through a powerful glass and it was spread above the glacier on the side of Mt.
Fair Weather. He affirms that the city is walled, that its houses are battlemented, and the chimneys surmounted by chimney pots; that within the walls there is a tall monument surmounted by the sculptured figure of an Indian in full headdress and feathers. His glass revealed to him some of the inhabitants, men in knee breeches and jackets. The only beast visible was a donkey-like creature, with a body as large as that of a horse.

The mirage appeared at first about 11:30 a. m. as a mist, and out of this rose the towers and battlements of the city as did those of ancient Troy. By noon the city was as clearly outlined as New York is from the Jersey Heights.

Mr. White rejects the various guesses that the phantom city is Antwerp, Montreal, or Salt Lake City. Its architecture is unlike that of any other city he has seen. That it is a real city he is certain, from the fact that he has seen three photographs taken of the mirage, one of which shows a tower rising amid the houses, and a later one the same tower finished. He believes that it is a mirage of a city at the North Pole on the edge of the traditional open Polar sea. He believes that when the sun is at its highest northern point, that is on June 21, the mirage of the Arctic metropolis is reflected to the point where it appears over the Muir Glacier. The legend of the Chilkats of Alaska supports this theory. They say that many centuries ago, when Alaska was a warm and densely peopled country, there came from the north, through the ice barrier, a savage people, fully armed, who laid waste the region and put its inhabitants to the sword. These savage warriors, he believes, to have been the ancestors of the American Indians, and he is convinced that in coming through the ice barrier they left behind a warm region about the pole, where the remnant of their people continued to develop and at length built the metropolis seen on St. John's day in mirage above the Muir Glacier.

The picture purporting to have been made from photographic negatives of the mirage represent an ordinary modern city without walls or battlements, but with spacious, comfortable-looking houses, surmounted with broad chimneys and interspersed with trees. In fact, they look like photographs of wash drawings made by an artist that was not too careful to follow the details of the legend.

Sans Souci.

The most lovely spot on Oahu is Sans Souci. This favorite seaside resort, which has been immortalized by the pen of Robert L. Stevenson, who resided there for months, is only four miles from Honolulu and within easy reach of the tramcars.
The surroundings and bathing at this famous resort are superior to anything found in the Hawaiian Islands. Cottages and board can be obtained on easy terms. The table set by the manager is better than any offered here at other hotels. For picnics, bathing parties and outings the best accommodation can be secured by giving notice to the manager.
